LETTER FROM THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF SUMMER 2024 ISSUE OF THE JOURNAL OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA (JSDA)

My Dear Colleagues and Friends:

I am delighted to bring you the Summer 2024 issue of the Journal of Sustainable Development in Africa (JSDA). In this issue, we have three well researched and written articles that focus on the themes of the JSDA: (1) Sustainable Development and (2) Sustainability. They are theoretically sound and have tremendous applications validity. The theoretical bases are quite operationalizable. The papers are:

1. Dynamics of Water Hyacinth in Ethiopia's Rift
   Valley: Trends, Status, and Future Prospects
2. Predictions of Farmers' Willingness to Adapt Artificial Pollination Innovation in Cocoa: Implications for Sustainable Cocoa Production in Ghana
3. Co-Learning a Vending System for Agroecology Market Shops in Teso Region

These three articles respectively address matters concerning a) Ecosystem protection and the health of ecosystems; b) Sustainable Agriculture; and c) the sustainability and improvement of the economy of a region. These articles add to the body of literature and research on sustainable development and sustainability of the environmental, economic, and social systems of Africa.

We appreciate the support of our readership, scholars, researchers, and policy makers who find our articles informative and instructive for current and future works in Africa.

Sincerely,

Valentine Udoh James, Ph.D.; CEI; CAQS
Professor of Environmental Management, Planning, and Policy
Pennsylvania Western University – Clarion, USA